Volume 9, Nos. 1–3 Contents December 1997

Cited in: ASISNet, Criminal Justice Periodical Index, Research Trends in Computer and Data Survey and Sociology Abstracts

SPECIAL ISSUE: Selected papers, abridged papers and summaries derived from the Third Biennial Conference on International Perspectives on Crime, Justice and Public Order, held at Dublin Castle, Ireland, June 16–21, 1996. Edited by Robert D McCrie

Note from the Editor-in-Chief 1

Introduction

International perspective on crime, justice and public order
G.W. Lynch (USA) 3–5

Crime and punishment: Dostoevsky revivified
W.A. Reynolds (USA) 7–10

Assets protection

The private sector and security: a bit on BIDS
J.P. Murphy (USA) 11–13

The Toller Lane Crime Management Model: tackling crime more effectively
L.C. Bellamy (USA) 15–21

Randomness and spontaneity in security negligence premises litigation
J.H. Lombardi (USA) 23–26

A typology of crime on the Internet
E. Metchik (USA) 27–31

Technology, international markets and whit-collar crime
L.A. Sullivan (USA) 33–34

Assessing forensic imaging options
H.L. Blitzer (USA) 35–41

Small boat crime: the activities of the boat owner
N. Kasic (UK) 43–45

Police humor: an ethnographic study
P.M. Hayes (USA) 47–48

Criminal justice-Policies and programs

History of the United States Parole Commission
E.F. Reilly (USA) 49–54

The community legitimacy of law enforcement
P. O' Hara (USA) 55–60

Perspectives on developing a quality criminal justice program
T.K. Moran (USA) 61–63

Starting New Criminal Justice Programs
S.A. Powers (USA) 65–67

Contemporary trends in community corrections
B.R. McCarthy, B.J. McCarthy (USA) 69

Cameras in the courtroom: American experience and the Irish experiment
E.J. Shaughnessy (USA) 71–75

Our pixilated planet: using video to internationalize the criminal justice curriculum
K.C. Jordan (USA) 77–78

Drug abuse

Crime and the 'drug problem' in Ireland
N. Owen (Ireland) 79–80

The globalization of the drug trade
R.S. Gelbard (USA) 81–82
Implementing a continuum of drug-abuse prevention and treatment services based on a biopsychosocial framework
K.E. Coughlin (New York) 83–84

Policing issues–Ireland
Discretion and policing in Ireland
P.J. Moran (Ireland) 85–88
Rethinking the origins of preventive policing: 17th century Dublin, Ireland, the first American style police?
S.A. Lentz, R.H. Chaires (USA) 89–91
The ethics of police interrogation and the Garda Siochana
P. O'Mahony (Ireland) 93–95
Supporting Irish victims
J. Guinness (Ireland) 97–98

Policing issues–The United States
Social control and police accountability in the United States
P.V. Murphy (USA) 99–100
Revolutionizing the police: fighting crime in New York City
E.B. Silverman, P.E. O'Connell (USA) 101–104
Socio-economic correlates of crime in the Brownsville section of New York City
R. Hamilton (USA) 105–113
What the international community expects: the role of international human rights standards in domestic policing
P.A. Lacovara (USA) 115–117
Global issues in organized crime
B.R. Ferreira (USA) 119–121
The role of community in securing peace and delivering justice
T.J. Quinn (USA) 123–131

Policing issues–The United Kingdom
Inspecting the police in England and Wales
A.P. Williams (UK) 133–134
International perspectives on criminal justice
J.A. Stevens (UK) 135–137
Making sense of media representations of British policing: implications for the police image
R. Mawby (UK) 139–142
Police accountability in a divided society: lessons from Northern Ireland
D. Walsh (Ireland) 143–145
Police consolidation in Germany and the United Kingdom
M.F. Meine (USA) 147–155
Global messages and local criminal justice cultures: consultation and change through focus groups
M. Davies (UK) 157–158
Postmodern police training?
D. Hayes, M. Lofthouse (UK) 159–161

Policing issues–Other nations
Victimization and fear of crime in Western Europe
M. Murck (Germany) 163–164
Organized crime in Russia: theory and practice
Y. Gilinskiy (Russia) 165–169
Public order police training in Turkey and its impact on police practices
İ. Cerrah (Turkey) 171–176
The Dutch criminal justice system: a crisis of identity
M. Punch (Netherlands) 177–184

Quality assurance in Finnish community policing
P. Raivola, H. Kiehelä, A. Sarjanen (Finland) 185–189
Lack of symbolic representation in drawing and play, and children's aggressive behavior
P. Bonaiuto, V. Biasi (Italy) 191–194
Drug crime in the transit zone
N.A. Ogilvie (USA) 195–196

Psychological factors in crime
Multiple meanings in aggressive behavior of children and pre-adolescents
A.M. Giannini (Italy) 197–198
Public perceptions regarding police response to domestic violence
M.G. Breci, J.E. Murphy (USA) 199–202
Pathological anger in 'crimes of passion'
S. Tsytsarev (USA) 203–204
Multiple personality and criminal law
R. Slovenko (USA) 205–207

Theoretical issues in criminal justice
Solutions to James Q. Wilson's policy dilemma
D. Goodman, R. Bonn (USA) 209–212
Terrorism as mass communication
J.W. Williams (USA) 213–215
Criminal means and political ends
R.R. Sullivan (USA) 217–220
Explaining crime in America
D.P. Geary (USA) 221–222
The law and politics of race and criminal justice: the cases of 'crack' cocaine and capital punishment in the United States
H.J. Sullivan (USA) 223–226
Inmates idleness : is work an answer?
B.R. Price, N.F. Jacobs (USA) 227–228

Workplace violence
How communication behavior affects perceived trustworthiness
J.M. Huegli, D.L. Kelley, G.L. Fischer (USA) 229–232

Youth and crime
The prevention of aggression in children: what do we know?
J.M. Levin (USA) 233–237
Addressing psychological deficit in the therapeutic management of aggressive displays in children
C.L. Katz (USA) 239–240
Youth gangs of South Texas
S.L. Rogers (USA) 241–243
Child victimization and safety strategies for children
N.A. McBride (USA) 245–246

Book review 247–248
Protection in the press 249–253
Calendar 255–256
Author index 257–258
Subject index 259
Instructions to authors 261–264